National Olympiad in Chemistry and Environmental Protection

On March 18, 19, 2016 in Yambol a National Olympiad in Chemistry and environmental protection was held. "Aleko Konstantinov" school participated repeatedly with two representatives - Lily Shiparova from 7c class and Stefan Trendafilov from 7b of class. For us this is a huge success because the quota for seven-grade students is very small. Lily and Stefan performed with dignity!

We are proud of you!

All participants in the regional Olympiad in Chemistry were invited to a meeting with the Dean of the Faculty of Chemistry at the University of Plovdiv which was held on March 16, 2016. The biggest group was that of 'alekovtsi'. The Dean of the faculty assistant professor Kmetov welcomed the participants and gave a motivational lecture. Interesting tests and visits to the faculty studies were demonstrated by the University students. All students received certificates and prizes.

Thanks to the students who donated their time and appeared at the municipal Olympiad in Chemistry, those who successfully presented themselves at the regional round and thanks to their parents who support and encourage them.

Innovative Schools Project

Open lesson of Chemistry and Environmental Protection

On 16 March 7b class held an open lesson in Chemistry and Environment on "Types of chemical compounds." A group work for compiling genetic transitions, a "What is excessive?" game and reflection were watched during the lesson.

The group work is a basic method and a conducting laboratory work in Chemistry in the 7th grade.

In conducting a laboratory work on "Activity of the halogen elements" students are divided into 5 groups, each group receiving colorless solutions and trying to prepare a plan for their recognition. The plan is presented to the teacher or to the consulting students and after approval, proceedings to undertake practical tasks are carried out.

INNOVATIVE LESSON IN 4 ‘A’ CLASS

Bulgaria during the Middle Ages

An innovative lesson with students from 4a class was carried out on the topic “Bulgaria during the Middle Ages”.

The class was divided into 5 groups. The students had to do projects. Each group had to prepare materials on a particular topic in advance . The children worked enthusiastically and performed their tasks. All of them participated actively.

In the end of the lesson the students responsible for the groups presented the finished projects to the class. Everybody was satisfied with their work.

APRIL 2 – A FAVOURITE HOLIDAY

International Children's Book Day - April 2, The library will celebrate the International Children's Book Day with several initiatives such as 'I love children`s books "- a literary carousel in third grade, 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs'- a dramatization, 'I will tell you about books ...'- a meeting between Tsvetana Mihailova, an author in Plovdiv and students from 4a and 4d classes. When there are such kind of events it`s never boring. They defy imagination in little children and provoke them to check their knowledge. Some of those events we have already held, and others are ahead.

The literary carousel created such an emotional intensity due to unsustainable willing to take participation that we could hardly keep the children to wait for the order. On a track principle we invented a story with a certain beginning. Every other child had to continue the thought of the one before him. We got such interesting moments that we are almost ready with the contents of an entire book.

The second part consisted of inventing riddles, each child pulling his/her image to think on it. Some managed quickly and easily, others didn`t but they were active in identifying the images.

In the end each group of four children received a different didactic task requiring speed and wits.

We continue to prepare other exciting activities as well.

SCHOOL FOR PARENTS

3 children's questions of divorce - how to respond?

When children ask questions they do not expect most complicated and detailed answers, they expect more reassurance and confirmation than information. They need to be confident about your love to them no matter what happens. They want to feel themselves understood. Here are the three most important issues to think over.

1. Why? Prepare for any "Why" questions, starting with "Why did you stop loving each other?" and ending with "Why are divorcing?".

Children want to see the big picture and the reasons for the separation. The fear behind this question comes from the fact that if mom and dad can stop loving each other, they can stop loving their child, too.

You should make your child sure that love between parents is very different from the love that the parents feel to their child. Explain to him that you love him forever. In most cases it is not necessary to give explanations about why you divorce. Explain well to your child that you're still a family, just a slightly different kind of family.

2. Is it my fault for the divorce? Young children are usually egocentric, which makes them feel guilty about your separation. To deal with this again you must make your child sure that your love for him is unwavering and indestructible. Your child should understand that the complicated relationships between adults have nothing to do with him and he just has no fault for the divorce. Tell your child that you both will always love him and that will never change.

3. Where will I live? Before you talk to your child, talk to each other.

You need a synchronized plan before you report a divorce. Tell your child when, where and how long he will stay. Assure him that he can express his views any time and you will comply with his wishes and feelings.

It is important to always speak respectfully about your former partner in the presence of the child. Do not involve your child in your conflict because the reasons for the divorce may be what ever but the former partner will always remain a father/mother of your child.

LIBRARY - INFORMATION CENTER

„Ivan Vazov and his works – a limitless inspiration for our beautiful scenery and native language” - an extracurricular reading in the 4th grade

A student in the fourth grade is already big enough to understand that comprehending completely the works of a great writer like Ivan Vazov it is necessary to delve into him many times. The beginning is put in the first grade with the poem „I am Bulgaria“, and the end for each of us is different. If we decide to read everything created by him, we will need many years and even after we have completed school education.

In the textbook literature students are introduced to the works „My kind Fatherland " „ Danube" and the short stories „Apostle in mishap” and „In Pirin." The time for extracurricular reading enables them to complete their knowledge with more examples of poems, short stories and travelogues with which the national poet has donated the Bulgarian literature.

Of course his personal life is also interesting for the students. Especially his period in Plovdiv which is extremely favorable for the creative development of Vazov. His works from that period start the basis of the post-liberation Bulgarian literature in almost all literary genres, so turning to the row of classic masterpieces.

From the presentation, which the students watched they not only gained a clearer picture of the above, but also felt the love and gratitude of the people to the poet. His name got memorized with golden letters in the students` minds.
